

Student conference Oct. 13th-14th, 2024

Institute of Linguistics, University of Bern

The Institute of Linguistics at the University of Bern is hosting a two-day student conference from Sunday October 13th until Monday October 14th, 2024. The conference provides a platform for linguistics students (primarily MA and PhD students) to present their own research project in a 20-minute presentation (followed by 10 minutes for questions). All topics with a functionalist orientation are welcome, including those from related disciplines. Presentations can be given in English or German. There is no registration fee.

External students:

In order to facilitate the participation of students from other universities, the Institute of Linguistics will be able to provide accommodation at a youth hostel free of charge for a limited number of external participants. Each participant must bring their own pillow, blanket (or sleeping bag) and bed sheet.

Arrival is planned on Saturday evening (October 12th) and departure on the evening of the second conference day (Monday, October 14th). Students also have the option of staying a third night at the hostel at their own expense.

Call for abstracts:

- Language: English or German
- Topic: any linguistic topic within a functionalist framework
- Length: 500 words maximum (excluding examples and references)
- Format: PDF
- The PDF of the abstract should be anonymous.
- The student's name, degree program (BA, MA, PhD) and university should be provided in the body of the e-mail.
- Submit by e-mail to: conference.isw.unibe@gmx.ch
- Deadline for submission: June 1st, 2024
- Notification of acceptance or rejection: by July 1st, 2024

All information about the conference will be posted on the Institute's website: www.isw.unibe.ch/forschung/studentische_konferenz or scan the QR-code.

Please send any questions by e-mail to conference.isw.unibe@gmx.ch.
